Al Beyond the Hype

By Ray Cooke Oct 01, 2019

Today, there are in-depth discussions about what 'might be' possible with AI, machine and deep learning-based analytics products on the market. Much of the conversation centers on practical ways to utilize deep learning and neural networks and how these techniques can improve analytics and significantly reduce false-positives for important events. When talking to end users about analytics, it becomes clear that many still don't take full advantage of analytics. In some cases, this can be due to a history of false-positives with previous generation technology, but in others, it can simply be a case of not believing that reliable analytics are achievable for their unique needs. The good news is that with AI, or more accurately, deep learning and neural networks, we are making great strides towards increasing accuracy.

In the past, developers tried to define what an object is, what motion is and what should be considered an interesting motion that we want to track versus false positive "noise" that should be ignored. Some classic examples are wind blowing leaves on a tree, rain, snow or a plastic bag floating by. For far too long, something as simple as motion detection has been plaqued by false-positives generated by wind. Users could try and reduce the sensitivity, and eliminate the false motion in a light breeze and still see false positives with motion events triggored in a wind storm. Using neural networks and deep learning to define objects such as humans, care, buses and animals means that traditional analytics can now focus on objects. These new algorithms have been taught to recognize a human being by seeing thousands of images of humans. Once an algorithm has learned these examples, it can apply this solvanced knowledge to existing analytics. For example, if a car prosed a line at an entry gate it might be acceptable. However, if a person passes that same line, we might want an airct. A shadow should be ignored and swaying tree branches shouldn't be alert. A shadow should be ignored and swaying tree branches shouldn't be considered. A car driving in the wrong direction warrants an alert, however people moving about freely is fine. All of the traditional analytics regarding motion such as appear / disappear, line crossing, object left behind and loitering will be more accurate and capable of additional refinement using AI and the power of object recognition.

Webinars

Your Powerful Tool for Generating Quality Sales Leads

Budget constraints and increasingly hectic work schedules can often prohibit today's security decision makers from physically attending seminars, conferences and expositions. Instead, it is important that today's security product and service vendors seek innovative and cost-effective ways to disseminate information and engage prospects and clients in a timely manner to spotlight new technologies, product launches, strategic partnerships and more.

That's why we offer a turnkey webinar solution that allows security products marketers to tap into our expertise and expansive market reach and drive valuable customer leads.

Vendor Webinars

The unique presentation of a webinar forum allows clients to deliver information and engage participants in a timely, costeffective manner. Whether at home or on the road, participants can view presentations through their web browsers while simultaneously listening to the audio. Discussions can take place in real time, and your audience of security buyers are encouraged to ask presenters questions. You provide the speaker, the topic, and the presentation and collect all the leads.

Editorial Webinars

In addition to single-sponsored customer-supplied webinars, Security Today offers the opportunity for companies to co-sponsor time-sensitive editorial topical webinars. This variation of the popular webinar medium allows a company to sponsor for a fraction of the cost of a sole-sponsored webinar. Plus, the webinar is promoted in the very same fashion as a sole-sponsored webinar.

Planned 2021 editorial webinar topics include:

- Video Surveillance
- Access Control
- Cameras & Storage
- Mass Notification
- And more

Webinar Sponsorship includes:

- Registration development and collection
- Comprehensive event promotion on our websites and through social media
- Logo and sponsorship acknowledged in promotions to 50,000* targeted Security Today e-news subscribers
- Reminder e-mails prior to webinar

We've reached thousands of security professionals in the past year, including those with titles such as President, Director of Security, Safety & Security Manager, CEO COO, Electrical Engineer, Project Manager, Facilities Manager, and more.*
